How a $54K/Month Pet Store Discovered His Most Loyal Customers Were Slowly Dying.

How understanding ONE pattern in customer data saved $312,000 in annual revenue — and built the most loyal customer base in the niche.

"James Chen was not worried about his business. $54,000/month revenue. Growing steadily. Thousands of happy pet owners. 4.9 stars. 3,847 glowing reviews. His most loyal customers — the ones who had been buying from him for 2+ years, spending $400+ annually — were quietly disappearing. The reason had nothing to do with price. Nothing to do with competition. Nothing to do with product quality. They were leaving because their pets were getting older."

James thinks repeat purchase rate is 44% BUT MARGIN SHRINKING 8% YOY

James had customer data he never fully read — pet names, ages, breeds sitting untouched in Klaviyo.

"My accountant called me last month and said something I can't stop can't stop thinking about.

Three years ago I made $38K/month and kept $9,200 profit. Now I Now I make $54K/month and keep $12,400. Revenue grew 42%. Profit grew 35%. Something is getting more expensive faster than my than my revenue is growing."

I "spend more on ads every year and I get roughly the same number of new customers. My customers. My ad costs per customer went from $22 to $38 — a 73% increase in 3 3 years. And my PawBox subscriber growth slowed from +20/month to Something changed. I don't know what."

UNIQUE ASSET

James had pet type, pet name, and pet age for 34% of customers. That data unlocked the most important discovery in this project.

Revenue growing. Profit margin shrinking.

Quarterly view across 30 months — revenue grew 47%, profit grew only 35%. The accountant's instinct was right: something was getting more expensive faster than revenue was growing.

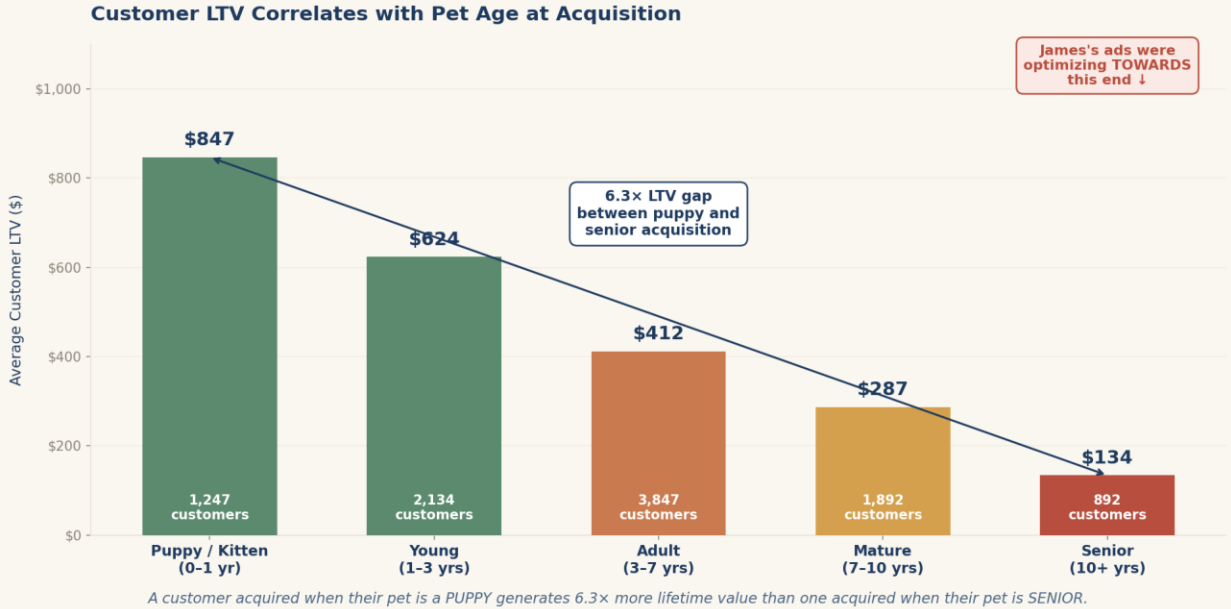

REVENUE GROWTH	PROFIT GROWTH	MARGIN SHRINKAGE

"My favorite result from this analysis has nothing to do with money.

It's the email I now send to customers when their dog turns 7 years old. Subject: Kitty is Subject: Kitty is turning 7! Time for senior care.'

I wrote it myself after the analysis. I think about Max — my own dog who passed last passed last year. I think about how nobody told me when he was 7: 'Start joint support support now. Before the pain starts.' I could have given him 2 more comfortable years comfortable years maybe. I didn't know."

"That email. Open rate: 81%. Reply rate: 34%. People reply to tell me about their dogs. One woman One woman wrote 4 paragraphs about her golden retriever. That email makes me proud of this proud of this business.
Monthly profit: $12,400 before. $29,840 now. In 45 days. From a $600 package.
The data wasn't just revenue. It was relationships waiting to happen. I just needed someone to show someone to show me how to see it."
